

PB para comment on a line in *Ennead 3.5.1

"There are Souls to whom earthly beauty is a leading to the memory of that in the higher realm and these love the earthly as an image; those that have not attained to this memory do not understand what is happening within them, and take the image for the reality..."

The happiness we find in certain persons, events, things, or places may pass away with time or with them, and leave us feeling so empty that it is as if they had never been in our life, or as if they had appeared only in a dream. This is because we left them, where we found them--in the world of illusion--instead of bringing them where they become transformed--in the world of Reality. 24.3.59